PROJECTS ACROSS THE CURRICULUM:

Math:

Research the height and weight of four different animals and include the allosaurus as one of them. Then, graph and discuss the results.

Geography:

Create a pamphlet, poster or PowerPoint presentation on New York City. Find at least ten facts and four destinations that you'd like to visit within the city.

Science:

In small groups, research theories on how the dinosaurs became extinct. Create a diorama or other type of three-dimensional scene depicting one of the theories.

Art:

Design a new gadget or tool that Jack can use on his next adventure. Create a prototype out of found objects in your house or using clay. Write a detailed description of this gadget's uses.

Language Arts:

Write an additional chapter based at another New York City landmark between Jack and the allosaurus. Use the book as a mentor text to create a scene which is action-packed and full of interesting details and dialogue!

Character Chart:

Fill out the following chart about Jack's personality as you read the book. Be sure to cite page numbers so you can find the details to support your opinions.
